About Bandhavgarh National Park:

Bandhavgarh National Park is one of the most popular national parks in India. It is located in the Umaria district of Madhya Pradesh. Bandhavgarh was declared a national park in 1968 within an area of 105 square kilometres. Currently the Park's buffer zone makes up an area of around 437 square kilometres. Even though the Park's total area is very large, visitors are restricted to the Tala Range, which covers an area of 105 square kilometres. This area has a high level of biodiversity and offers great chances of seeing tigers. The Magdhi, Kallwah, Khitauli, and Panpatha zones make up the core zone of Bandhavgarh National Park.

The Park has a large breeding population of leopards, various species of deer, more than 20 species of mammals and around 250 species of birds. The most famous residents of Bandhavgarh are Royal Bengal tigers and leopards. The density of the Bengal tiger population at Bandhavgarh is one of the highest in the world. Also keep an eye out for spotted deer, sambar deer, langurs, red-faced monkeys, Bengal foxes, mongooses, striped hyenas, Asiatic jackals, wild boars, nilgai, chausingha, chinkara, Indian bison, and Asian elephants. Some of the common birds found in Bandhavgarh National Park are little grebes, egrets, lesser teals, white-eyed buzzards, black kites, crested serpent eagles, black vultures, Egyptian vultures, common peafowl, red jungle fowl, doves, parakeets, kingfishers, Indian rollers, and Indian peafowl.
